

Dear Friends: Greetings from the Clerk

By Steve Angell

About 200 years ago, one of the most powerful women preachers among Quakers was Sarah Lynes Grubb, who preached widely across the British Isles. Late in life, Friend Sarah reflected on the challenges of ministry. From God's calling her into the ministry, when she was 17 years old, she "shrunk from it exceedingly." Often she hesitated and

"felt such a reluctance" to minister, that she "suffered the meeting to break up without my having made the sacrifice: yea, when the word of life in a few words was like a fire within me." Still she persevered and traveled "a path untrodden, in my early travels as a messenger of the Gospel, having to go into markets and to declare the truth in the streets." Over the course of her 69 years, uncounted thousands of people were to benefit from her ministry.

What is God calling you to? What fire burns inside you? When God calls, like Sarah, do you sometimes shrink -- maybe, exceedingly? Stay with the leading. Seek the counsel and encouragement of Friends. Above all, be faithful to your call. It was not just 360, or 200, years ago that Friends were called to witness to the truth publicly. The same is true today -- even if the path you are being called into is one previously untrodden.

Quaker Convincement

By Phyllis Martin

I stopped by a neighbor's house recently and somehow the conversation came around to Unitarians (she is a member of the local group) and Quakers. She asked how I had first come to attend Friends' meeting and about others in Bloomington meeting. "We are almost all convinced Friends," I said. She smiled. "Convinced, I like that!" "Yes," I said. "

It's how we describe those who have come to Friends from other faith traditions."

I realized afterwards that my explanation of "convincement" was narrow and really a hark back to the past when Quakers distinguished between members who were born into Friends' families and those who became Friends from "convincement." The distinction has long since disappeared since many Yearly Meetings, including our Ohio Valley Yearly Meeting, no longer accept the idea of "birthright" Quakers which seems to imply a bit of elitism and does not fully embrace the testimony of equality.

News from Second Month Executive Committee Conference Call

- Teen Committee: Eight OVYM teens attended The Quake That Rocks the Midwest. The next service trip will be to Philadelphia in June. The teens want to focus on homelessness and water as well as explore their Quaker heritage. Carol Simmons, Youth Secretary, is planning on visiting monthly meetings to share the program more.

- Statistical Reports: Meetings should have received a request to return their Statistical Reports to Frank Huss of Community Meeting.
- Nominating Committee: Yoshiya Togami of Lexington Meeting was approved as a new member. The committee is still looking for someone to take over The Quaker Quill editor and the Assistant Treasurer position. A draft of the Procedures for Nominating and Naming Committee was shared by Assistant Clerk, Rex Sprouse. Naming Committee is appointed by Executive Committee.

- There is still a need for someone to clerk the Yearly Meeting Planning Committee.

Olney Friends School Protects Pastures for Posterity (Not for Fracking)

Olney Friends School in Barnesville, Ohio decided not to lease rights to potentially rich oil and gas reserves under its land for hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking." In so doing, the school aligned itself with a tradition of environmental stewardship echoed in many Friends organizations. It also declined hundreds of thousands of dollars in guaranteed compensation. Still, the school's mission will flourish with financial support from Friends.

... Quaker testimonies of community, simplicity, service and stewardship - all intimately connected - shone vibrantly in this process (of discerning how to advance the school's mission while balancing Quaker principles with financial health). In making the decision to forego the riches of fracking and to attempt to save the riches of the earth literally beneath the school and community, Olney Friends School positioned itself as a leader in environmental stewardship.

John Woolman could not foresee the scale and complexity of the world's economies or ecologies, but he set the stage for a tradition of stewardship more than two centuries ago. The school reaches out to Friends now to help it move forward in the Light, and to transform its convictions into opportunities to strengthen the school's future. (from Protecting Pastures for Posterity pamphlet)

Added note from Dan Coppock who grew up in Eastern Hills Meeting and is now on staff at Olney Friends School :

I would only add that I was very happy with the decision. The board struggled long and hard, and I was really impressed with the work they put into making the decision. As you know, we're not a wealthy institution, so it was hard to balance our very real need against our future very real need. You may be interested to know that Ohio Yearly Meeting, who owns most of the land that Olney uses, decided not to decide on leasing their rights as well, and I think Olney's decision had an impact.

It is very hard to be against fracking up here. There have been measurable benefits to the local economy, although a lot of that money has been foolishly spent. I don't know of too many institutions other than Raven Rocks who have abstained from leasing their mineral rights.

Miami Quarterly Meeting Report

Miami Quarterly Meeting met at Joint Quarterly Meeting. Two ad-hoc committees were formed. The first will be a search committee for a location for the 2015 Joint-Quarterly Meeting in a more central location for Miami Quarter. The second is to address the issue of Ohio Valley Yearly Meeting financially supporting Joint Quarterly Meeting. The next Miami Quarterly Meeting will be 2-16-14 at Miami Monthly Meeting. Veronica Frost, Clerk

Whitewater Quarterly Meeting Report

Whitewater Quarterly Meeting Friends met for business on Tenth Month 12, 2013, in the context of the Joint Quarterly Meeting at Happy Hollow Camp near Nashville, IN. The Presiding Clerk shared with Friends that his service as Clerk will end at the end of his current term, that is, at the end of Ohio Valley Yearly Meeting sessions in summer 2014. Friends appointed a Nominating Committee charged with bringing forward at the next session of Whitewater Quarterly Meeting the name of a Friend to serve as the next Whitewater Quarterly Meeting Clerk. This committee includes Marcia

Ankrom, Michele Tomarelli, and Emmanuel Greene. The winter session of the Quarterly Meeting, scheduled for First Month 19, 2014 had to be cancelled due to hazardous travel conditions across the State of Indiana. The spring session is scheduled for Fourth Month 2014 at Lafayette Friends Meeting. The date is yet to be confirmed. Rex Sprouse, Clerk

Nowadays everyone, whatever their origins, applies for membership as a “convinced” Friend.

After the conversation with my neighbor, the word “convincement” continued to stay with me. Although “conversion” is generally used to describe someone who moves from one faith to another, I don’t think I have ever heard Quakers use the word “converted” to describe an individual who has decided to become a member of the Religious Society of Friends. Perhaps this is because “conversion” seems to imply changing to something different and new. It also seems appropriate for adherence to outward forms and creeds. For Friends, as I see it, “convincement” is simply recognition of something we already possess - God, the Light, the Root, the Spirit within.

We Quakers use different names as we try to give expression to something that is both intimate and a mystery. From our experience of the Light flows our belief that there is that of God in everyone and our consequent commitment to peace and non-violence. George Fox emphasized inward, personal experience when, in 1652, while addressing a gathering of regular church-goers, he posed the question: “You will say that Christ saith this, and that aposles say this, but what canst thou say?” Yet, he also set about organizing Quaker meetings with convinced members for he recognized that by joining together we share the measure of the Light we each have and grow stronger in our individual understandings and collective witness.

For Friends, as I see it, “convincement” is simply recognition of something we already possess - God, the Light, the Root, the Spirit within.

This was printed in the Bloomington Meeting newsletter. Phyllis Martin is their clerk and contributing an occasional “Clerk’s Corner” to the newsletter is part of the clerk’s responsibility.

Campus

We have been consulting with curators of the Quaker Archives in the Watson Library at Wilmington College to assure that minutes and other important meeting documents will be deposited in a timely manner.

A peace vigil is held at noon on the third Saturday of every month – weather permitting—at the corner of Fife Ave. and College St. in Wilmington. We always welcome students or other visitors as we remind passersby that “Peace is not the Answer.”

In October and November our discussion group considered “Shared Security: Re-imagining U.S. Foreign Policy,” a joint publication of FCNL and AFSC. Plans for 2014 include consideration of a new book by Phil Gulley.

We wish to share with other Friends the following message from Timothy Jones, son of Canby and the late Eunice Jones, which we have recorded with our official minutes:

Several years ago, after the death of Eunice Jones, Timothy brought his concern to Meeting for Business that his father Canby was beginning to show the first few signs of needing help to manage his life, and perhaps it was time for Canby to leave Wilmington. Campus Friends Meeting was led to prolong Canby’s ability to remain in Wilmington. To that end the meeting formed a Circle of Care for Canby Jones. The subsequent work, generosity and wisdom of that group made it possible for Canby to remain in Wilmington for another nine years.

Let this minute record both Canby’s and Tim’s gratitude and thanks, first, to the Monthly Meeting for its wisdom in creating an appropriate organization, and second to all who served over the years on the Circle of Care. Special gratitude goes to Dale Hayes for his legal knowledge and experience with the elderly, and to Linda Sears, for her well-earned, widespread knowledge of the ins and outs of elder care. We are especially grateful for Linda’s service in later years as holder of Canby’s financial and health care powers of attorney, for both her drive and organizational skill in orchestrating the move from Friendly Center to Cape May Retirement Village Assisted Living facility in March of 2012 and again from Cape May to Chester Valley Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, in Malvern, PA, in early August of 2013. (Canby Jones can be reached c/o Timothy Jones, 431 Lake George Circle, West Chester, PA. 19382-2193)

Canby and Tim would publicly say, “Well done, Friends!” and “Thank you!” to all.

On January 11 Campus Friends held a one-day retreat at the Cape May Retirement Village in Wilmington. We gave our attention to a look back at the early years of Campus Monthly Meeting, frank evaluation of present realities in our corporate experiences, and hopeful plans for our shared future.

Clear Creek

We are benefiting from the new energy and perspectives brought to our community by the presence of Earlham and ESR students while they pursue their studies. One of the special features of our meeting is the ongoing participation by those who sojourn with us while their journeys bring them to Richmond.

We celebrate the contributions of many folks who are sharing time and energy with Clear Creek to take care of the tasks that bring life to our fellowship.

The holidays were brightened by many special events beginning with the Winter Solstice Labyrinth walk held in the meeting-house. Clear Creek joined with the other Friends Meetings in Richmond and the Richmond Church of the Brethren for a Christmas Eve service held this year at West Richmond Friends Meeting. We held our annual Christmas Morning worship in front of a fire burning in the Wyndham Room fireplace.

As part of our second hour educational events, we are discussing queries arising from the Syracuse Cultural Workers 2014 Peace Calendar. Copies of the calendar were provided to all members of the community. The queries are also posted on our website which is on the Quaker Cloud. We have also commenced the new year with a revived meeting newsletter that is distributed electronically.

Community

The heart of our community is meeting for worship on Sunday morning. We are blessed with periods of living stillness, punctuated with prayerful and deeply-felt ministry. Our children add spice to the first quarter hour and then retreat to a vibrant First Day curriculum. Most weeks after meeting, we share a little food together and enjoy regular second hour events ranging from baby showers to presentations on the spiritual journeys of our members.

A new Community Friends website, hosted by the Friends General Conference Quaker Cloud, is up and running. The decision to move to the Quaker Cloud brought up questions of what kind of internet presence we want as a meeting. Twenty years ago, the meeting's public face was defined by a wooden sign in our front yard and a display ad in the Yellow Pages. People still drive by and occasionally consult phone books, but our most important signage is electronic. If we want people to find us, we need to be welcoming and inviting on the internet.

Issues of personal privacy were already being discussed before this change and these colored our discussion of how to make use of the Quaker Cloud. Should our monthly meeting minutes be posted on the website? If so, should we include individuals' names? What about pictures and names in the on-line edition of our newsletter? Fortunately, FGC seems to have anticipated many of these issues and allows us to have both public and private pages on the website. This, of course, raised the question of how to decide who will have access to private pages. We are carefully picking our way through these questions and the others that are kicked up. So far, we are very pleased with the new site, but we recognize there is still work to do – both for our web clerk and for us.

In the last Quill, we reported on our revitalized Peace & Social Concerns Committee. Renewal seems to be spreading. The Library Committee has begun pulling together all the meeting records and examining our books to see what we need to keep, what to remove, and what newer materials to acquire. This work has spun off an ad hoc committee that has been considering which of our officers would be responsible for the various meeting records, where to store them, and what to transfer to the OVYM archive in the Watson Library at Wilmington College.

Not all our energy is devoted to self-care. Monthly, members of the meeting serve a meal at Tender Mercies. In 2014, the Transforming Jail Ministry Worship Team, made up mostly of meeting members and attenders, has been conducting a monthly worship service for prisoners. In the past year, 284 incarcerated men and women have been served by the team.

Right now, it's bitterly cold outside and it's hard to imagine that it will ever end. We hope that you are reading this on a warm, sunny day. Paul Buckley

Eastern Hills

Snow and blessings were whirling all about us during this holiday season. Our dear and weighty friend Kathleen (AKA Kay) Faux moved closer to our neck of Cincinnati, and we are delighted to report she has recently rejoined us as a member of EHFMM.

The holidays were chocked full of celebrations. Homemade Christmas cookies were served up after lunch at the Jimmy Health House. Several musical Eastern Hills carolers sang to an audience of residents and families during the Quaker Heights annual holiday dinner. At our own Christmas party, we fed and entertained ourselves quite well after Meeting, regaling each other with gifts of our assorted talents. The eight maids a milking were no-shows, but we did have many inspirers inspiring, a couple of jokers joking, several strummers strumming, two pipers piping, two poets reading, a crafty crafter crafting, an actor reenacting, and one classical pianist. Haiti bound over-the-counter medication ornaments were hung from the tree, and a delicious, largely plant-based but hearty pot-luck feast was simply the icing on the pumpkin spice cake.

Ready or not, 2014 arrived. A series of EHFMM Second Hours with a spiritual focus are planned for the coming year. In the initial hour of this series, we examined what spirituality means to each of us. Also this year, Martha Viehmann assumes a leadership role with the Greater Anderson Promotes Peace (GAPP) organization. Wishing you and yours a spiritually enlightening, meaningful and productive year as well!

Best, Susan Reutman

Welcoming Kay Faux to EHFMM on 1-26-14

Dayton

Dayton Friends have settled into our new location at United Christian Center in Dayton. We have found the space to be comfortable, roomy, and attractive and the location convenient, as it is more centrally located in Dayton. We wish to express much appreciation to our Meeting space committee and others who worked very hard in the search for a new space, those who cleaned and painted the new room, and those who moved and then unpacked and organized our furnishings.

We have been working on visioning and discernment in the past few months. Please hold our community in the light as we continue to struggle with concern about dwindling membership and attendance.

We very recently hosted an interfaith vigil to pray for the abolishment of the death penalty in Ohio and around the world. Prayers were also offered for all victims of violence.

Sam and Pat Johnson moved to Minnesota this past summer. Their new address is 1504 Parmeadow Dr, Northfield, Minnesota 55057. They have become members of Canon Valley Friends Meeting in Northfield. They enjoyed the holidays in their new home and are grateful for the opportunity to live near their son and his family.

Terri Scarpelli

Englewood

Englewood has enjoyed the Christmas season with our candlelight service which included a short play my members and attenders young and old. We are fortunate to have a young family joining us for worship and other activities.

Illness of our Charlotte Paugh is currently on our hearts. At 91 she may be the meeting's oldest member but has been one of the more active people with her involvement in the Dayton International Peace Museum and other humanitarian causes. We hold her in the Light.

We continue to prepare a meal each month for approximately 60 homeless men at the St Vincent homeless shelter in Dayton.

Russ Wheeler

Fall Creek

Fall Creek Friends Meeting regularly meet for fellowship and a light lunch following our 10am meeting for worship. We continue our now longstanding practice of holding a second meeting for worship on the first First Day of each month at 1pm. A pitch-in lunch ("second lunch") follows at 2pm. We regularly meet for business on the second First Day of the month. In recent months, we have begun to discuss (one chapter at a time) Michael Birkel's 2003 book A Near Sympathy: The Timeless Quaker Wisdom of John Woolman after lunch on the third and fourth First Days of each month.

Our rich schedule of sweet time together has been subject to numerous cancellations and delays in the past couple of months, due to illnesses, family emergencies and events, floods, and (above all else) hazardous driving conditions. We are looking forward to the spring and health and sunlight, while abiding in the Inner Light.

Rex Sprouse

Fort Wayne

We cooked and served dinner at a homeless shelter which we do a few times a year. We did a lot of Christmas gift donations to the shelter, too. We collected bedding for Children's Hope House which is a home for families to stay at when they have children in the hospital. We also assembled toiletry kits for men leaving drug and alcohol rehab and staying at a temporary home.

We are starting having our monthly Bible studies as a carry-in breakfast before worship. We finished discussing the Quaker testimonies in First Day School. We pray for the Indiana Legislators to open their hearts and work for the dignity of all.

Lexington

The renovation of the Lexington Friends Meetinghouse continues. The demolition of the annex, and the gutting of the original structure are complete. New windows and doors have been installed, allowing lots of natural light into the lower level, which used to be totally enclosed. What an improvement. Our geothermal wells have been drilled, and new walls, plumbing, and electrical systems have been roughed in. We look forward to the installation of the skylights when weather permits. With the new wall studs in place, we can now see the shapes and sizes of the rooms and spaces. This building will better accommodate our needs. As much as possible we have re-used building materials from the demolition. Our LEED certification process is proceeding well.

Ben Griffith has been serving as project manager – liaison between the design/build team and the meeting. He has contributed hundreds of hours, amounting to half-time work. We are profoundly grateful for his devoted service. Melissa Levine, our treasurer, has also given much time to the project as she manages payments and works with Ben on making the bank draws on our construction loan. Our thanks to them both. This is a very exciting project. We are proud of what we have achieved so far and look forward to moving back into the meetinghouse next August or September. To paraphrase Margaret Mead, never doubt what a small, committed group of Quakers can do.

Lexington Friends are also exploring Quaker Quest. Once our meetinghouse is “reborn” as an environmentally sustainable, LEED certified structure, we anticipate showing it off to the public, demonstrating what can be done and on a surprisingly modest budget. We think this will also be a good time to host Quaker Quest sessions. We will be having our first Quaker Quest workshop with Quaker Quest trainers on March 22. We will be able to accommodate a small number of Friends from neighboring meetings who are interested in learning more about Quaker Quest. Please contact Betsy Neale (bneale@twc.com; 859 277-6101) for more info. Betsy Neale

Oxford

Oxford friends enjoyed two holiday events. We held our usual Advent Event, with a sumptuous potluck and mutual hospitality, and then, in the days before Christmas, the children presented their Christmas play to thunderous applause. This year, they simulated a newscast from Bethlehem, including interviews with the Motel 6 innkeeper, a stuffy Roman official, a shepherd, and the angel Gabriel. In a stunning bit of improv, the angel addressed the meeting from the overhead mezzanine, encouraging us to fear not. We continue to rejoice in the ministry provided by these young Quakers.

Right now, we are getting a little tired of winter, especially the part about a parking lot clogged with snow. Some of us are considering getting our own groundhog and giving it special instruction.

Louisville

This has been an eventful quarter for LFM. We have worked with the Burundi Evangelical families who have been our guests for several years as they started separate worship times where Burundis from the local community come to worship in their Evangelical tradition. We are also helping them connect with Evangelical Friends International—Eastern Region (EFI-ER). The Burundi hope to plant an Evangelical Friends Church in Louisville for the larger Burundi community here with help from EFI-ER.

Our Meeting continues a year-long discernment process to find unity on what to do with our scholarship and emergency aid programs that have been in place for years. It has been a detailed and sometimes painful undertaking; requiring us to face our blindness and our fears, and even to get legal advice about the limits of such programs. At this time, we are looking for ways to define if and what kind of programs we might want, and how to structure their processes. To that end, we ask that other Meetings please share with us their processes, mission and purpose statements, or any other descriptive documentation for their own programs of this nature. We also want to know what your key considerations if you decided not to have one or both of these kinds of programs.

There are many questions we seek to address and hope to gain some wisdom from your experiences. A few questions we struggle with are:

How do we define the situations and people we might seek to serve?

How much aid is too much and how much is too little? Why?

Do you have standard, fixed amounts offered to each applicant or is aid needs based? If the later, how do you determine needs?

Should we devote more energy to referrals and assistance such as finding agencies, offering transportation to appointments, and helping people navigate paperwork rather than offering monetary aid? How do you keep this resource information current?

How often should we update policies to keep pace with the economy, changing needs, and our own ability to provide?

Your input will be greatly appreciated.

Miami

Adult First Day School continued its lively discussions during 2013. After an in depth study of the OVYM Faith and Practice, we moved into studies of the Quaker Doctrine of Inner Peace, The Gathered Meeting, The Peace Testimony, and we finished up the year with a new study of Shared Security, Reimagining U.S. Foreign Policy (a working paper from AFSC and FCNL), which we are continuing this year.

During 2013, we welcomed Brenda Furnas (wife of Fred) into membership. David Furnas married Amanda Bowlby this year, and the couple now live in Charlotte, NC. Lonny Burger joined the Lebanon (Ohio) Ministerial Association and represents Miami at meetings of that interdenominational clergy organization.

Miami regularly supports operations at Quaker Heights Care Community and several members are on the Board and various committees. On December 22nd, Miami hosted a Meeting for Worship at Quaker Heights involving carol singing, inspirational readings, and silent worship, which touched the hearts of the residents. Miami was also represented by several members assisting with the Annual Quaker Heights Holiday Dinner on December 12 and hosting the Annual Memorial Meeting for Worship on November 21st.

On October, the local 3rd graders took a tour of Waynesville for this history studies. They stopped at Miami's Red Brick Meeting-house for lunch and to learn about Quaker history and Quaker influence in Waynesville. The Red Brick Meetinghouse also participated in the Waynesville Home Tour for the holidays on December 7th. Visitors learned about the Quakers and their simplicity. They also learned how some Quakers celebrate and decorate for the holidays, and why other Quakers elect not to celebrate Christmas.

Yellow Springs

Yellow Springs Friends Meeting is bereaving the loss of our member Radar Browne-Middleton. He frequently offered ministry in our meeting which was grounded in his extensive reading and reflection. His prayers at the close of meeting as we hold named people in the light were felt by many gathered there. First day's meeting for worship came before his memorial service, and thus it became an impromptu memorial meeting, as our Meeting has experienced before at the loss of a member or attender.

On Christmas eve we have always shared the story of Christ's birth and renewal in story, song, and a little play that the children put together. This year Peg Champney and Bev Logan got very ambitious and prepared children, three kings, and an adult chorus to do an abridged version of Amahl and the Night Visitors. Many of were moved to tears by the relationship between Amahl (11 year old Autumn Kola) and the three kings, who included teen Noah Winold. We are thinking we may do it again next year!

Appreciation from a Reader -

Quaker Quill Family,
Thank you so very much for printing the article that Josh Medlin had submitted about me and my journey to become a "Friend". While I have not heard from anyone, as of yet, it was a blessing to be thought of and loved by Josh to make my feelings known to learn and discover all I can through studies and prayerfully any and all Quakers who wish to know me and learn with me.

God Bless...

A merry little wish for a very happy Christmas!

Invitation to Shower Agnes Moon with Cards

I would like to make a request of everyone who knows my mother, Agnes Moon. Instead of a party, send her a birthday card. If 95 cards could be sent to her daughter, Susan Hyde, on or before her birthday, March 17, 2014, that would be fantastic and a great way for her to remember the day.

Her memory isn't as good as it used to be so please sign your first and last name it could help trigger a memory. There are a couple of things one could do to make the card even more special; 1) Include a picture of yourself or of you and your family. On a separate piece of paper label the picture with the names of the people in order and tell where the picture was taken, what was the occasion and what year it was taken. 2) on paper to be inserted into the card retell a favorite memory or story of Agnes Moon. Include where it took place, what was the event and what was the year.

Please send cards to her daughter, Susan Hyde, 1405 President Street, Yellow Springs, Ohio, 45387-1326

If you have any questions call Susan Hyde at 937-776-3291. Thanks for your help making Agnes's 95th birthday extra special.
